This study aimed at differentiating the effects of the oestrous cycle from those of other factors on breast physiology. Discrete changes in blood flow rate (Q), energy expenditure (EE) and skin blood flow (SBF) were measured in ten healthy, premenopausal females during the oestrous cycle (day 0 to day 21) using a steady-state method. The relation between the oestrous cycle and Q, EE and SBF was calculated as the percentage of the total value. A 5-day oestrous cycle was characterized by a decrease in Q and increased EE, with a milder effect on SBF. The latter 2 parameters had distinct fluctuations during the cycle. An abrupt decrease in Q occurred on day 8, whereas a sharp rise in EE began on day 10. In early dioestrous, both parameters gradually returned to near-precycling levels, indicating a gradual decline in breast sensitivity. That both Q and EE followed similar trends during oestrous suggests the involvement of hormones, possibly prolactin. The fluctuation of SBF may correlate with the cyclical changes in breast milk production.Q: Running multiple Spark jobs in Parquet on AWS Elastic MapReduce I'm trying to run multiple Spark jobs from the same code. However, it seems like Spark cannot connect to a local Hadoop cluster when there are multiple tasks. Here's a sample code: object MySparkJob { def main(args: Array[String]) { val input = FileInputFormat.load(sc, args(0)) val output = FileOutputFormat.create(... args(1 82138339de
