I've tried the following but it doesn't work: `$(tabs).tabs({ activate: function(event, ui) { if ($(ui.newTab).attr('id')='details') $(tabs).addClass('active'); } });` The class 'active' is added to all tabs when the page is loaded. When I click the tab, the class isn't removed. So it's appearing every time. I'm really new to Javascript, so I apologise if it's a really stupid question. A: I think you are using wrong method 'activate'. You have to use activateAfter. Example `$( ".selector" ).tabs({ activate: function( event, ui ) { ui.newTab.addClass("ui-state-active"); // add your logic here }, activateAfter: function( event, ui ) { ui.newTab.removeClass("ui-state-active"); } });` Initial experience with a unique technique to reduce cerebral arteriovenous malformation-associated headaches. A wide range of headache disorders may be associated with cerebral arteriovenous malformations (CAVMs). While many venous malformations remain asymptomatic, others can develop debilitating headaches. Traditionally, the only reliable treatment is surgical removal of the malformation. Less invasive modalities have been attempted in the past, but have been of limited efficacy. More recently, a newly developed surgical technique termed the "internal-outflow technique" was reported in the treatment of CAVM-associated headaches in 3 adult patients. The authors report the outcomes of a new series of surgically treated pediatric patients with CAVMs who also experienced severe headaches. A retrospective chart review was
