of the crime because in truth, an illegal drug transaction was taking place. But the reality is that a total of 3,893 individuals were arrested in connection with the Sandinista terror party in the 1990s. One of the most notorious recent events in Nicaragua was the massacre of the peaceful protest at Somoza Park in Managua on April 19, 1989, when the then-President Anastasio Somoza Debayle's car was stoned, sparking a melee that resulted in sixty-nine deaths. But the number of people killed in this massacre was far from the truth. Only six were killed by Somoza's "personal guard" (contrast that to the invasion by the Sandinista National Liberation Front that left thousands dead and hundreds of thousand left wounded and disabled). This raid was part of a series of attacks in Managua during this period that were carried out by the Sandinista National Liberation Front. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that only one person per day is murdered in war-torn Colombia, and when the conflict ends, the figure rises to three killings per day. But the reality is that between 1990 and 1994, more than one hundred thousand Colombians were murdered (the full toll is estimated to be between 200,000 and 300,000). These figures are from government sources, but even then, they are considered to be only a partial reality because many of the victims are "disappeared." Also, most of these murders are committed by the right-wing paramilitaries as part of their campaign against the leftist guerrillas. In the 2000s, the number of homicides in Brazil almost doubled in comparison to the 1980s, from 6,857 to 13,157, in no small part because the homicide rate rose from 31.2 to 88.5 per 100,000. The rise was due to an increase in "retroactive killings" by police and the military: the police perpetrated about three-quarters of the homicides and the military 17 percent. The real number of homicides is thought to be four times higher. Though the trend is worrying, there is no reason to believe that it is an epidemic. The Peruvian officer Diego Garcia de Palacios Hernandez, known as the "Sower of Death" for his extrajudicial killings of rebels, is said to have murdered about 3,000 people in the early 1800s as part of the war between the Spanish Empire and the rebellious English colony of Lima.
