The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of New Guinea Impatiens plant botanically known as Impatiens hawkeri and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'Balfiemb'. The new cultivar originated in a controlled breeding program in Elburn, Ill. during October 2010. The objective of the breeding program was the development of New Guinea Impatiens cultivars with continuous flowering, large flowers, and a freely branching growth habit. The new Impatiens cultivar is the result of cross-pollination. The female (seed) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Impatiens hawkeri breeding selection coded 61133-1, not patented, characterized by its light pink-colored flowers, medium green-colored foliage, and moderately vigorous, compact-mounded growth habit. The male (pollen) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Impatiens hawkeri breeding selection coded 61135-1, not patented, characterized by its dark green-colored flowers, medium green-colored foliage, and moderately vigorous, compact-mounded growth habit. The new cultivar was discovered and selected as a single flowering plant within the progeny of the above stated cross-pollination during May 2011 in a controlled environment in Elburn, Ill. Asexual reproduction of the new cultivar by terminal stem cuttings since May 2011 in West Chicago, Ill. has demonstrated that the new cultivar reproduces true to type with all of the characteristics, as herein described, firmly fixed and retained through successive generations of such asexual propagation. Turbochargers are included in automotive engines to force more air into the engine than could be normally drawn into the engine under given conditions. The turbocharger is driven by the engine through a shaft; and, when the shaft is rotated by the engine, so is the turbocharger, causing it to spin. The greater amount of air in
