The UFED Physical Analyzer is the most advanced analysis, decoding and reporting tool in the mobile forensics industry. The result of a study on the potential of receptor cross-reactivity in imaging PET tracers: implication of [18F]-fluorothymidine PET for quantitative assessment of 2-deoxy-2-[18F]fluoro-D-glucose uptake. In PET, the potential of cross-reactivity between a positron emission tomography (PET) tracer used for the in vivo visualization of a specific biological target and a PET tracer used for the imaging of an unrelated biological target is a common concern. The aim of the present study was to assess the effect of the tracer cross-reactivity in [18F]fluorothymidine ([18F]FLT) uptake by integrin $\alpha\beta3$, a specific target for PET tracers such as [18F]-labeled integrin $\alpha\beta3$ -binding peptides. In a clinical dynamic [18F]FLT PET/computed tomography (CT) protocol, we compared the uptake of [18F]FLT in the bilateral parotid gland between the left and right sides. The correlation between the uptake of [18F]FLT in the left parotid gland and the uptake of [18F]fluoromisonidazole ([18F]FMISO) in the right parotid gland was also evaluated. Correlation and partial correlation coefficients between the uptake of [18F]FLT in the left parotid gland and that of [18F]FMISO in the right parotid gland were -0.942 ($p = 0.008$) and -0.912 ($p = 0.012$), respectively. The correlation was found to be more significant in all subgroups that divided on the basis of tumor staging ($r = -0.961$, p
