Note You may also be interested in Photoshop tutorials that address Web design: # Chapter 14. Illustrator One of the defining differences between Photoshop and Illustrator is that Photoshop is a vector-based raster editor while Illustrator is a pixel-based raster editor. The term vector describes shapes, lines, and colors that can be manipulated like geometric mathematics. It is the basis of the two main graphic tools: Illustrator and Inkscape. Illustrator is Adobe's native vector art program. It lets you draw vector-based objects including boxes, logos, abstract shapes, and more. You can then add colors, effects, and effects to your vector shapes and export your work as a graphic format. Inkscape is an open source vector program that includes many of Illustrator's features. Like Illustrator, Inkscape can open and save .svg vector format files and integrate with Adobe products such as Photoshop and InDesign. Adobe provides a wide selection of tutorials, including ones for those who use the Macintosh version, for those who use the Windows version, and for those who want to learn the basics. # Paths, masks, and groups in Illustrator The two main ways to create artwork in Illustrator are to draw shapes and modify shapes in a _document_ (that is, separate art objects or separate document files). Drawing shapes A shape is a closed-off area of artwork that you can fill with color or stroke. You can draw polygons, circles, rectangles, ellipses, and many other objects in Illustrator. Drawing a complex shape is similar to drawing a polygon in a traditional two-dimensional drawing tool. You drag the ends of a line to create an object. It takes the same amount of time to draw each shape. The problem with shapes is that once you release your mouse, you are no longer working in that shape. You have to start over, or use shortcuts to move back and forth in your drawing. Drawing shapes is good for creating simple objects, but it can be tedious to create complex objects. Plus, if you try to work on a complex object while in the middle of a document, you

There are two kinds of Photoshop: Photoshop Classic : It is the older version of Photoshop. It has no built-in filters like a normal Photoshop and has an interface very different from the one used in the new Photoshop. Photoshop Classic is cheaper than the new version, has fewer filters and no 3D tools or Photoshop Elements. Photoshop Elements : It is the newer version of Photoshop, the one used by photographers, graphic designers, web designers, Discord emoji creators and meme-makers. It has all the essential photo and graphic editing tools, a simpler interface and most importantly, built-in filters (which are now called Photoshop Tools) that can be used to add interesting effects to images. Photoshop Elements is the most popular version of Photoshop, used by photographers, graphic designers, web designers, Discord emoji creators and meme-makers around the world. Adobe Photoshop is a cross-platform, standalone image editor used for creating, editing, exporting, and printing photos and graphics. Photoshop is both cross-platform (works on computers, tablets, and smartphones) and cross-application (it can be used to edit other applications' images, for example, to edit a website's image, or to edit a video's image). Adobe Photoshop is available in many languages and is very popular among graphic designers because it has many useful features, such as layers, masks, and auto-enhance. Q: Visual Studio 2017: How to make all source / projects to be dynamic link libraries, and save project to same location as it is in project manager? I have two projects in my solution, they need to be 'dynamic link' libraries, so that they can be used in other projects without copying any files. One of the projects is big, it has 2000+.cpp files, and I want to make it 'dynamic' link library. Is there an option in VS 2017, to make the project to be dynamic link library, so that it will take the same location as it is in the project manager. Because I also want to save the project folder, not the project files? A: For projects that are DLLs and need to be copy-linked, this is called "code generation". You'll need to set the target Platform Toolset to v120 (older compilers are included there as well, but those aren't directly supported on Windows - at least not yet) and the target Platform Toolset must match the compiler you're using to build this. The visual studio build output window should give you the location of the missing files, and VS should automatically compile this when you run the build. If that doesn't work, you can always check the project file itself. The x64 platform toolset has an append build initialization parameter that defaults to false. If you set it to true, Visual Studio generates the code in the same folder as the.vcxproj. project.AppendItemUniqueId("{EC82BA44-57F7-43C0-A8A5-4D5A9ECF01FE}") If this parameter is not set on x64 projects, Visual Studio will have generated a.vcxproj generated by itself when creating the project. Make sure that this is equal to the output path (folder) you would like the output to be. Note that this will create a build dependency on all x86 projects. If neither of these options works, you can always create a new directory for the output and copy-link the code there, instead of having Visual Studio generate them at the same folder. I have provided a simple sample project here on codeplex. If you run into build breakages, like this one: Some or all the code generated is actually not found in the application because it's generated, you can find the

863 So.2d 1261 (2004) WESLEY MEDIA, INC., a Florida corporation, Appellant, v. ST. JOHNS MEDIA, INC., a Delaware corporation, Appellee. No. 5D03-2005. District Court of Appeal of Florida, Fifth District. November 24, 2004. *1262 Donald B. Cohen of Akerman, Senterfitt & Eidson, P.A., Miami, for Appellant. Robert H. Schwartz and Sharon C. Dein of Lowenstein Sandler, Tampa, for Appellee. PLEUS, J. Wesley Media, Inc., appeals from a final summary judgment of reformation of its contract with St. Johns Media, Inc. The reformation issue is whether the parties modified the listing of the property contained in the contract when they agreed that the house was owned by Wesley. We reverse. St. Johns owned a house listed with a realtor. The listing agreement contained the following provision: 3. It is understood and agreed that the property owner's only ownership interest in the subject property is a simple interest in fee simple which is either a house or a contiguous lot or parcel of land which is occupied by the residence and which is either owned by the property owner or which the property owner has a right of survivorship with, as indicated, a representative or assignee for the benefit of the property owner's estate, provided the property owner is not a minor, cannot consent, has not abandoned the property, and has not been convicted of a felony. It is further understood and agreed that no property interest, other than the premises, is conveyed by this listing. On May 22, 2000, Wesley, the owner of a house across the street from the property, contacted St. Johns and requested that he list it with a realtor. The listing agreement contained the following property description: Lot: 107, Block A, NE 1/4 of NW 1/4 of SW 1/4 of NE 1/4 of NW 1/4 SE 1/4, SECTION 29, BULKOWNGS RANGE, DADE COUNTY FLORIDA The listing agreement contained the following provision: 2. The above described property is offered for sale and/or lease: By Owner: SEE ATTACHED SCHEDULE OF PROPERTY DESCRIPTION, LOT 107, Block A, NE 1/4 of NW 1/4 of SW
