Story Five ancient sheet of papyrus have recently been found deep in the Balinese jungle. Archaeologists from the local University concluded that they are the important parts of Queen Leyaks Necronomicon, an ancient tome of dark magic filled with horrors so terrifying, they are too dangerous to even name. The United Nations assembles experts from around the world to investigate, and search for more pages from the Necronomicon. One of them is Professor Kobayashi, a leading historian from Kyoto University. Together with his son Tetsuo, and daughter Ai, they moved to Bali. Tetsuo didnt know the reason behind the move, but quickly took to his new home, the International School of Bali. There, he met a local girl named Ida Ayu, who shared his passion for history. Together they formed a club, the Culture Research Club (CRC). Shortly afterwards, Tetsuo stumbled upon his fathers private research notes. He quickly realized what they contained, and the next day presented the notes to the Culture Research Club. Instead of being daunted by the danger, the club agreed to hunt for the missing pages of the Queen Leyak's Necronomicon, and that's where the calamity began.Gameplay Bunka no Kenkyu - Revival of

What's new in Diorama Builder:

For Demo By Stephen Yanes November 16th, 2008, 12:07 Via an old post, I was referred to this, a preview of The Shoppe Keep 2 which looks an interesting game. There will be full version sometime in 2008. Somethings are different: There will be ~28 unique shops, with over 20 types of store fronts (for the purchasers to visit on their way around town). Shops will have their own animations from the moment they open, to a final close as players ring up the till and make their purchases. Each shop will have a unique store front, packed with all sorts of things, normally one of few very unique items (like a train set for kids, or stuffed animals). Shop keepers will have a chance to make some spare change. Reward them for their hard work... maybe a lighter, a token of appreciation? As you wander around the store, keep your eye out for the wanted posters for the thief! This isn't the initial release, just the in progress walk through. This is looking quite good, and will probably be a perfect game, with all of the mini games like wheel of fortune on gba, slots and harp simulator. Personally I would hope it's psp version, I haven't checked though and I may be wrong. Multiplayer or at lease online isn't presented, but I suspect on net might work, or may work for Japanese versions, not sure. Enjoy! It worked for me with Flash Player 9.0.115.0. Update: It isn't working because you need to save the file as a.swf even if it says Flash Player. You can't just hit save and it will play. You need to save it as "kiosk.swf" and then go into flash and click "load" for kiosk and it will run. Have you experienced any bugs? November 19th, 2008, 05:48 Steven, it is not working for me too. With any Flash Player that I tried (9, 10, 9 Beta and the latest one... I think 10 Beta but it has to be the latest one for it to work) saved as a.swf so here is the instruction how to work it out: In the menu, click on "file". First, save your file as.swf, then go to the address you want to save it (

Q: Query SQL Server for a missing entry in table B I need to create an SQL query which will return a missing entry in table B based on the following: table structure: table 1: ID Number | Member Number | MoneyValue table 2: ID Number | Member Number | Entry Date/Time table B: ID Number | MissingEntryDate/Time I need to query the data to return a member when the entry in table 2 is less than 10 days away. I'm not sure how to go about this given that the query has to work on records which can have more than 1 missing entry as well as record which don't have a missing entry. I've made a DB diagram below. The first two sets give a list of members which are dated at the cutoff. Any help greatly appreciated! A: In SQL Server, I do not find anything simpler than a combination of LEFT JOIN, OR and IS NULL: SELECT a.id_number, b.mv FROM table1 a LEFT JOIN table2 b ON a.id_number = b.id_number AND b.entry_date/time < D
