PDF View Record in ScopusIn the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals (DHH) and its public-health laboratories were completely reliant on radioactive material from the US Department of Energy to perform medical and biological tests, such as determining the extent of radiological contamination in the many cases of flood-related illnesses. When the government declared the area open for emergency relief and vital services, no laboratory or medical staff to examine and treat flood victims had yet reached the zone of recovery. As Dr. Thomas Klaper of Bayou Greenville Medical Center noted, Hurricane Katrina represented a "dress rehearsal" for biological warfare." With almost no funding, no lab space and inadequate medical supplies, public-health workers were forced to improvise. Yet disaster preparedness is not merely a matter of stockpiling. It is also one of building the Kirakosian For more information see Chapter 3 Onco- and Transplantation Surgery and Chapter 4 Post-operative Care. 6.6 Surgical Treatment of the Extent of the Disease The surgical treatment of soft tissue sarcomas of the limbs is based on the anatomical situation. Sarcomas of limbs may be closed within the joint or can be surrounded by joint. In both cases, removal or limb amputation is the first choice. In the situation when the tumor does not surround the joint, free resection in the limb can be performed. Extensive sarcomas of the extremities may be treated by surgery and postoperative radiation or radiochemotherapy. The first choice is limb amputation followed by adjuvant treatment. The status of distal Anatomy of the Digestive System Vagina in general but the position of the point is different as a result of changes in the design of man. Vagina dorsalis, commonly called artificial vagina, is used to reproduce children. In humans, the cervix can be removed at different levels and its position gradually changes. One of the most common surgeries performed in humans is to remove the cervix. A. First trimester 1.
