You are a _godsend_ to me in terms of exploring architectural design, esp with his background and clear thinking. With that said, I'd love to see more from him and others with similar backgrounds. Many of the same questions come up over and over. Q: IntelliJ Plugin: is it possible to make available the full AST of a project? We are creating an IntelliJ plugin that works with existing Java applications. We would like to be able to show the full source code of an application to the user. Is there a way to get the full AST of a Java project? A: You can get the AST using the ProjectWizard. Is it possible to make available the full AST of a project? I don't believe that is possible from the plugin. If you need to check the full AST of a project you will need to either do a copy of the project file, create a new project file, or maybe write your own custom extension that would help you obtain this information from the existing project.
