The attack on a plane carrying the Brazil soccer team that crashed in Colombia Sunday night had been filmed hours before, the brother of one of the victims said Monday. A team of investigators was set to arrive in Colombia on Tuesday, a day after the flight of the Brazilian squad, including players, journalists and staff, went down in a mountainous area after taking off from Medellin airport in the early evening.

"This was planned, and was filmed hours earlier by the perpetrators," Bruno Rodriguez, whose brother Jairo died in the crash, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from his hometown of Porto Alegre in southern Brazil. He said the attack was a premeditated attack by the "military wing of the mafia" and had been carried out by the same group of people who "killed a city councilor from Curitiba" just hours before. "I'm sure of that," he said. "What happened Sunday night was planned." Rodriguez, a lawyer and the older brother of 29-year-old Jairo, spoke to reporters before the team's flight to Rio de Janeiro. Jairo Rodriguez had been scheduled to fly to the U.S. later this week for a youth football tournament. The Bolivian team, the other players and the media have also escaped unharmed. At the time of the disaster, several members of the Brazilian team were asleep in their rooms at the Intercontinental hotel near the airport
