Banks also argues that the district court miscalculated his career offender status under Sentencing Guideline § 4B1.1. We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, and we affirm. We review the district court's legal determination that Banks was a career offender de novo. United States v. Cole, 359 F.3d 420, 422 (4th Cir. 2004). The district court's interpretation and application of the career offender guideline is also reviewed de novo. Id. The career offender guideline required the district court to apply § 4B1.1 based on Banks's prior North Carolina convictions of robbery with a dangerous weapon and breaking and entering with the intent to commit a felony. The district court did not err in holding that the conviction for robbery with a dangerous weapon was a violent felony because North Carolina law defines robbery as the taking of personal property from the person of another or in his presence by use of force or putting the person in fear. North Carolina v. McCloud, 718 S.E.2d 887, 888-89 (N.C. Ct. App 04aeff104c
