Adobe Photoshop CC 2019 adds a new Image Bundles feature, which gives you a way to create and publish image bundles for global distribution. And a new way to publish workspaces lets you create groups of document images and distribute them as a bundle. Images are stored in.psd files in a single folder, and users can use the new Bundles feature to publish their collaborative workspaces or share them with others across the globe. For designers and creatives who dive deeper into their projects, the new Share for Review feature enables them to seamlessly collaborate on a creative plan from any system or off-premises location using a browser. Share for Review is a feature that allows the creation of skins for apps, which are essentially user interfaces that show the same user interface on any device. Users can embed the same UI as the app they are collaborating on, regardless of the device they are using. Using this feature, designers and creative professionals will be able to have their designs or art asset ready before they come into Photoshop and share them with their team instantly. In the timeline of their project, they could create a UI skin or a device or work on art assets, and share them with the rest of their team. In addition to the main application, they could also use other applications with Share for Review. So the UI design and art assets will also be shared across all of their other applications. For instance, a hotel designer can start a project in Photoshop, work on it, and finish it in Sketch using Share for Review. Then they could switch back to Photoshop CC 2019 and collaborate with their team on the project in Share for Review, and save the project. All images and assets can move between apps seamlessly because the skin will be shared across all the applications where Share for Review is being used.
